The Origin of Leo's Coney Island

Peter Stassinopoulos and his younger brother, Leo Stassinopoulos arrived in America in the 60's from a tiny village in the Kalamata region of Greece. Both brothers came to the U.S. with little money, no formal education, and barely speaking English. In 1972, the two brothers teamed up to open their first restaurant called Southfield Souvlaki Coney Island in Southfield, MI. The brothers' initial success was due to their hard work and personal touch to the Coney Island business.

The family recipe for their famous Greek Salad dressing along with the chili and other great homemade items has been the backbone of success for the company. The Stassinopoulos brothers were able to build up a reputation for quality food and service and followed up by opening their second location in 1979. By 1982, the Farmington Souvlaki Coney Island was opened and the brothers continued to build their strong reputation in the community. Soon thereafter, the decision was made that these restaurants were unique and needed to be identified by a common banner. Thus, Leo's Coney Island was born.

Today, there are more than 55 Leo's Coney Island restaurants and they have become the largest Coney Island restaurant group in Michigan. The majority of these stores are now owned by franchisees who started out working for Pete and Leo as cooks or busboys. Pete and Leo believe in helping others achieve the American dream just like them.
